Gary M. Budzinski

Senior Vice President and General Manager,
Technology Services, HP Enterprise Business

Hewlett-Packard Company

Gary M. Budzinski is senior vice president and general manager of HP Technology Services at HP. In this role he oversees a broad portfolio of services focused on support, deployment, availability, infrastructure and security solutions for business-critical, homogeneous environments all designed for the customer.

In his current position, Budzinski is dedicated to transforming HP Technology Services into a global customer experience-centric organization. He works closely with HP product groups to ensure HP customers have access to the complete solutions they need to standardize, optimize and automate to keep their technology and business working.

Budzinski has a deep background in information technology and organizational transformation. Previously, he led the Americas region for HP Services which included Technology Services, Consulting Services, and Outsourcing Services. Before joining HP in 2005, he was president of Aon Consulting Human Resources Outsourcing. Earlier, Budzinski had an extensive career with EDS Corporation in different executive roles.

Budzinski has a bachelor's degree in mathematics from Lawrence Technological University in Southfield, Mich., and a master's degree in computer information management from Oakland University in Rochester, Mich. He studied extensively in the fields of mergers and acquisitions and global management at the Thunderbird School of Global Management and participated in executive development programs at the London Business School and the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University.
